ABOUT US

William Robertson and Sons Ltd was founded by William Robertson, "Pudding Wullie", over 120 years ago, in 1898. He started out making potted meats, fruit puddings and meaty puddings in a little two room factory, which he bought for only £20. The only equipment he had was two boilers and a horse and cart which he used for daily deliveries, chilled with ice from the fish market to keep his goods fresh.

In 1926, after feeding the troops in World War 1 and making haggis for the Prince of Wales, (Duke of Windsor), William bought a farm in Gorgie. He transformed the farm buildings into a factory equipped with larger, more advanced machinery, allowing him to expand and manufacture various new products, including scotch pies, steak pies and sausages with the help of his son, James Robertson, "Pie Robertson".

James ran the business until retiring, then handed it over to his son, Walter Robertson, "Wallie Pie", who in 1981 decided to completely renovate the old farm buildings, replacing them with a new, modern purpose-built factory.

Walter now in his 90's has handed the reins over to his son and daughter, Stephen and Shona. In 2003 they made the decision to move the business to the outskirts of Edinburgh to a modern factory in Eskbank. Stephen and Shona are still currently running the business with the help of the fifth generation, Jamie and Alex.
